4. Scientific Areas of Specialization

Terror and Crime, Conflicts and Reconciliation, Parenthood and juvenile delinquency

5. Academic Profile

My interest is focused in two main fields of research, the first is in examination of the way that personal relationships between different members of the family might influence a person's involvement in deviation and delinquency and the second deals with what drives people into involvement in terrorism or what can facilitate cooperation and reconciliation between ethnic groups. In order to develop this knowledge, I am a partner in a research team that examines child neglect among families in Israel (a long term study) and I work with a co-researcher from Bar Ilan University and Ashkelon academic college in order to produce Scientific findings regarding the subject of terror and reconciliation.
